

Blackburn with Darwen LA chose UniServity's cLc for all our schools because we were impressed by the company, by their approach, and by the product.

UniServity provided a high quality response to our invitation to tender with lots of specific examples, and this scored highly on our initial short listing. That was followed up by a presentation that was personalised to the Blackburn with Darwen context.

All of the people we met from the company delivered the same messages and made us feel that we could easily work in partnership with them: we got a great response to any questions we had at all stages of the process, and when the Chief Executive attended a meeting in the final stages of negotiation this showed a real commitment from UniServity.

As a company, UniServity's approach puts a real emphasis on teaching and learning – not the technology – and it was obvious that UniServity listens to their customers and develops the product in response to their needs. The UniServity clc offers good functionality that links in to the way young people today use technology, and the product that can easily be customised to meet individual school needs.

Finally, UniServity made it clear they really wanted to work with us, and so far our experience of working with them has lived up to all of our expectations.
